April 2009

***** Investor Alert *****

Real Time Measurements Inc.

---

The Headline:

April 20, 2009 - Real Time Measurements Inc. has won a bid for a contract to supply down-hole electronic instrumentation estimated to be worth about $2.3-million to a major oil producer in the Middle East region.

The Opportunity:

With only 31 million shares outstanding and at a current share price of just $.03, this small Canadian junior with a market cap of approximately $900,000 just landed it's largest contract win in it's history worth nearly three times it's current market value. This contract, to be finalized in the next 90 days, is with a major Middle Eastern oil company that controls high grade oil reserves that are in the top five in the world and has an aggressive production profile over the next 10 years. Real Time Measurements will use this company-making contract win as a spring-board to establishing a base in the Middle East to capitalize on other near-term opportunities.

The Rest of the Story:

Real Time Measurement Inc. is a Calgary-based company that provides quality products and services for electronic measurement applications to oil and gas companies worldwide. They have been in business since 1995 and up until this most recent contract win of $2.3 million announced on April 20th, the single largest order they had ever received was a $500,000 service contract with a company in Tunisia a few years ago. Even though the win is significant on its own and qualifies as a “company-maker”, the real opportunity will rest in the potential follow-on orders that may result if the company's products perform as expected. This major oil company has an aggressive production profile over the next 10 years and will require a significant number of down-hole electronic instrumentation installations over that time frame. The goal is to set up a small service center in the Middle East to penetrate other contract opportunities.

Why did Real Time Measurement win this company-making contract? Four reasons (1) The price was competitive (2) The bid package was well prepared and met all of the selection criteria (3) Real Time's products are built with exceptional quality and advanced features compared to the competition and exceeded the requirements of the proposal (4) Many Middle Eastern oil and gas companies prefer the “Made in Canada” products.

In addition to the Middle East contract win, Real Time Measurement is focusing their efforts on expanding market share in the U.S. and Canada. A US subsidiary of Real Time formed just 6 short months ago has already placed some equipment with major oil and gas players offshore the Texas and Louisiana Gulf Coast, in the Pennsylvania Marcellus Shale and just last week shipped their first set of tools to the North Slope in Alaska.

Next Steps:

Real Time Measurements expects to finalize the agreement within the next 90 days. The customer will issue a Letter of Credit (LOC) when the contract is finalized. The most likely scenario is for the Export Development Canada to guarantee the LOC which will allow Real Time Measurement to borrow against it to finance the building of the equipment. Also, management will be following up on several other near-term opportunities.

Summary:

With a current market cap of only $900,000, this Canadian junior is in the enviable position of just being awarded it's largest contract in it's history worth three times it's value and is ready to embark on it's first rapid growth phase. Investors should consider Real Time Measurement for inclusion in their speculative portfolio as the current share price sits near it's all-time low and does not properly reflect the current and future opportunities of this small, innovative company to service the oil and gas industry.
